It still mentions ghosts and witches, which I was hoping it wouldn't. This book would need to have lots of follow up dialogue when reading it to small children.5 of 7 people found the following review helpful. AmbiguousBy PaysureI never expected this to be a book promoting Halloween by fastening it to Jesus. I was really disappointed. I understand what the author was aiming for, however, it was certainly missed attempt. At face value I think a two star review is being generous. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. An excellent resource for Christian families who still allow trick-or-treating By Michelle C. This book is perfect for parents like me who, for whatever reason, won't prohibit their children from enjoying the fun of Halloween and trick-or-treating but want to take the "scary" out of the holiday. We're a mainline Christian family who keep Jesus as the center of our home, but don't believe there's any harm in letting our children dress up and trick-or-treat. Plus, small children tend to get frightened by some of the things they see and hear during the Halloween season - my daughter had nightmares - and this book helps emphasize that there is nothing to be afraid of because we have Jesus, and uses Bible verses to illustrate the reasons. If you don't allow your family to celebrate Halloween at all, this is not the book for you, but it's a great resource for parents who want to find a middle ground with their children.

From Publishers Weekly A trio of religious board books offers reassurance and encouragement. A boy reflects on faith in Let's Shine Jesus' Light on Halloween by Diane Stortz, illus. by Rusty Fletcher. "On Halloween/ I might see black cats,/ ...But God's power is the reason I don't/ have to be afraid." A Bible verse underscores the boy's thoughts. Other Christian-themed titles include Let's Celebrate God's Blessings on Thanksgiving by Lise Caldwell, illus. by Priscilla Burris; and Let's Remember Jesus' Birth on Christmas by Christine Harder Tangvald, illus. by C.A. Nobens. Copyright 2002 Reed Business Information, Inc.
