readings for a graduate level AT class I took and I can honestly say it was the most enjoyable "text book" I've had. The author incorporates a lot personal accounts from people living the experience so it's not just informational statistics and schools of thought, but actual scenarios that you are likely to encounter. I also loved the check lists and "how to" tools that illustrate how to apply the information when working with consumers. Of all the text books and reference guides I had in school, this is one of the few that I still have in my office 5 years later!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. In the latest (4th) edition of this well-regarded work, Dr. Scherer brings us up-to-date on the "battles won and battles lost" of the men and women with disabilities whom she followed closely in previous volumes. The result is an engaging, eye-opening, and frank discussion on assistive technology from the standpoint of those who use it (or have opted not to).

"I really felt the need to write and say thanks for developing such a wonderful and valuable book! -- Erin Simunds, graduate student
