Heartwrenching and motivational By Bridget Conner This book the 2nd of 3 in a collection of (true) short stories about pets with disabilities. Having personally rescued 2 special needs dogs I was curious to learn what trials and tribulations others had experienced and how they overcame them. I was not disappointed! Each and every story was moving and thought-provoking. I eagerly await the release of volume III. I purchased multiple copies of this volume and also volume as gifts to family and friends. It helped them see that my dogs and I are not unique and that disabled pets are much like disabled people, amazing souls!

This book is the much-anticipated second volume in the Lost Souls: FOUND! Inspiring Stories About Pets with Disabilities series. It features more than 40 inspiring stories about pets who have overcome physical and emotional challenges to go on to become great family pets. This is a must-read for any cat lover or dog lover. These books are especially inspiring for people who are battling difficult times in their lives, as seeing how these pets overcome hardships gives many people hope of overcoming their own challenges. Excerpt: "Almendra was born without front legs, and instead of teaching her how to walk, the family that was responsible for her litter dumped her at the Mexican veterinary school, where I am a student. She was covered in open wounds from dragging her body around, and she could only move one of her back legs. The hand-off from her former guardian was strange. The woman gave her to me and said, 'Please take care of her.' Then she started crying and ran away! I was left there alone, holding this disfigured, bloody puppy in my hands, thinking, 'What is next?'" -Adhara Talamantes
