4 of 5 people found the following review helpful. First things firstBy Gregory A. ReichweinRon's concept of enlightened self interest is difficult for some to grasp and they pushback because they say it feels selfish. The allegorical design of this book helps them understand that the exact opposite is true. If you're familiar with air travel the first message you here should air pressure be lost is to put the mask over your own face first before you attempt to help others. You can't help others if you don't have the wherewithal to do so. Enlightened self interest as taught in this book helps you go from the somewhat selfish pursuit of success to the life impacting pursuit of significance.2 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Life changing!By CustomerSure, many books have the potential to change your life by sparking new ways to think about success. However, in my case this book is a life changing textbook! This book helped me position myself for a promotion (and a big hunking raise) and lay out a future that is filled with potential promise. You can be successful by focusing on making a significant difference within ... and this transformative text is a vehicle for such change. Just be positive that change is what you want, because "Make a Difference: From Being Successful to Being Significant" delivers.3 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Fundamentally Life ChangingBy David YoungThis book is in that short list of books that I keep on my desk, phone and bedside. It is as profound as it is easy to read. The narrative allows the reader time to learn and think about improving not only their life but how to improve the lives of the others we interact with. I will not take on a new mentee without this book being the agreed upon textbook.

Make a Difference: From Being Successful to Being Significant is really great. I love how you bring the reader step by step to understanding the true difference being just being successful and being significant, in other words making a difference in this world and knowing you matter.
