TextbookBy David G.Great read and info. A little pricey but worth it. Hoping for additional resources from same or similar authors. Awesome!1 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Packed with FactsBy Denise E. BaileyThis text was required for my multicultural education (K-8 Teaching Class). It has been extremely helpful. The chapters are long (40+ pages each), so it takes a while to get through it. The content is disheartening and motivating all at the same time. Focusing on what multicultural education actually looks like in the classroom, "Making Choices for Multicultural Education, Sixth Edition" encourages all to examine the latest theoretical perspectives on multicultural education, as well as personal beliefs about classroom diversity. The authors show how schools reflect broad patterns of institutional discrimination, and then offer five different approaches to addressing such problems in the classroom.

From the Back Cover How do we define multicultural education? What do people mean by the term multicultural education? What does it look like in the classroom? The Sixth Edition of Making Choices for Multicultural Education explores the latest theoretical perspectives on race, language, culture, class, gender, and disability in teaching, and encourages you to examine your own personal beliefs about classroom diversity. The authors show how schools reflect broad social patterns of institutional discrimination, and then offer five different approaches to addressing those patterns in the classroom. The Sixth Edition edition: Incorporates the most recent demographic data and literature relevant to ongoing struggles Discusses intercultural education as practiced in Europe and Asia and how it differs from multicultural education in the US Features a stronger global perspective that contextualizes globalization, oppression, and other topics using examples from both the U.S. and other countries Examines and contextualizes poverty, both personal and group, and its influences on the ideas discussed And how do we practice it in the classroom?
