Margot Northey, Lorne Tepperman, Patrizia Albanese : Making Sense in the Social Sciences: A Student's Guide to Research and Writing before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Making Sense in the Social Sciences: A Student's Guide to Research and Writing:

The Making Sense series offers clear, concise guides to research and writing for students at all levels of undergraduate study. The volumes in the Making Sense series-covering courses in the humanities, social sciences, life sciences, engineering, psychology, religious studies, and education-are intended for students in any undergraduate course with a research and writing component, but are especially appropriate for those at the first-year level. Revisions to the sixth edition of Making Sense in the Social Sciences include new chapter summaries, coverage of new developments in technology-based research and writing, new sections on systematic literature reviews and on the nature of knowledge, and up-to-date coverage of MLA, APA, and SSS documentation styles.

About the Author Margot Northey is Former Dean of the School of Business at Queen's University. Lorne Tepperman is Professor in the Department of Sociology at University of Toronto. Patrizia Albanese is Professor in the Department of Sociology at Ryerson University.
