0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Informative for my Capstone By Edgar Tigranyan Awesome textbook. I used it for my social research class to write my research proposal for capstone class. Really informative book with myriad of terminologies that are useful in social research and in research with human subjects. I recommend any undergraduate student to read it once, or maybe just go over the highlights to have an overall idea of how to properly conduct qualitative and quantitative research methods. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Terrible read. By philsome Wording in this textbook is horrible! Were they drunk or half-asleep when they wrote this? The layout is not user friendly or intuitive at all! Found some inaccuracies and info seems highly outdated. I hated reading this book for class. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Terrible, disorganized, unclear! By Nikki You guys, this book is so terrible. The language of the book is so vague, obscure, and confusing that I can read a definition 7 times and still have no idea what is being defined. It's so completely unhelpful. I have to google the definitions myself because the definitions provided here tell me nothing!!!!

""""The strength of this text is in its brevity. In a one semester course, it is impossible to cover all the topics in a comprehensive text in any depth. I would rather my students learn the fundamentals of doing research a few topics in depth. They can then build on this knowledge, if they need to, in order to learn new types of analysis. I also like the types and varieties of exercises included in the text. """"It is a worthy contribution." "It is a worthy contribution." -- Diane Pike (06/01/2007) "It is a worthy contribution." -- Diane Pike About the Author Daniel F. Chambliss, PhD, is the Eugene M. Tobin Distinguished Professor of Sociology at Hamilton College in Clinton, New York, where he has taught since 1981. He received his PhD from Yale University in 1982; later that year, his thesis research received the American Sociological Association's Medical Sociology Dissertation Prize. In 1988, he published the book Champions: The Making of Olympic Swimmers, which received the Book of the Year Prize from the U.S. Olympic Committee. In 1989, he received the American Sociological Association (ASA)'s Theory Prize for work on organizational excellence based on his swimming research. Recipient of both Fulbright and Rockefeller Foundation fellowships, he published his second book, Beyond Caring: Hospitals, Nurses, and the Social Organization of Ethics, in 1996; for that work, he was awarded the ASA's Elliot Freidson Prize in Medical Sociology. In 2014, Harvard University Press published his book, How College Works, coauthored with his former student Christopher G. Takacs. His research and teaching interests include organizational analysis, higher education, social theory, and comparative research methods. Russell K. Schutt, PhD, is a professor and the chair of sociology at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, and a lecturer on sociology in the Department of Psychiatry at the Harvard Medical School (Massachusetts Mental Health Center). He completed his BA, MA, and PhD (1977) at the University of Illinois at Chicago and a postdoctoral fellowship in the Sociology of Social Control Training Program at Yale University (1977-1979). His other books include Investigating the Social World: The Process and Practice of Research, Fundamentals of Social Work Research (with Ray Engel), Making Sense of the Social World (with Dan Chambliss), and Research Methods in Psychology (with Paul G. Nestor) all with SAGE Publications, as well as Homelessness, Housing, and Mental Illness (Harvard University Press) and Social Neuroscience: Brain, Mind, and Society (coedited with Larry J. Seidman and Matcheri S. Keshavan, also Harvard University Press). Most of his peer-reviewed journal articles and book chapters focus on the effect of social context on cognition, satisfaction, functioning, and recidivism; the orientations of service recipients and of service and criminal justice personnel; and the organization of health and social services. He is currently a coinvestigator for a randomized trial of peer support for homeless dually diagnosed veterans funded by the Veterans Administration.
